STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

Certain minor amendments in the State Bank of India Act, 1955, have been found necessary in the light of the experience gained since the Bank was originally established in 1955. The amendments proposed are explained in detail in the notes on clauses attached to the Bill.

NEW DELHI;

MORARJI DESAL

The 3rd February, 1959.

Notes on clauses

Clause 2.—Section 22 deals with the disqualifications for appointment as a director of the Central Board of the Bank or local board or local committee. The amendments proposed are intended to remove the prohibition in respect of a legal or technical adviser of the bank being appointed as a member of such boards or committees and to define some of the expressions used in the section.

Clause 3.—The amendment is of a drafting nature.

Clause 4.—Section 33 deals with the business which the bank is permitted to transact. Clause (i) (d) of the section as it stands is capable of being so interpreted as to permit the State Bank to make loans on the primary security of the shares of ordinary joint stock companies. This is not, however, the intention, and the object of the amendment is to clarify the position. Opportunity is also being taken to redraft clause (xii) so as to improve its language.

Clause 5.—The language of sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 34 of the principal Act is somewhat obscure, and it is proposed to redraft these sub-sections, so as to make the meaning clear.

Clause 6.—Section 35 of the State Bank of India Act provides for the acquisition by the State Bank through negotiation of the business of any existing bank. It has, however, been found from actual experience that the procedure for the acquisition which is now prescribed is elaborate and time-consuming, and it is proposed accordingly to redraft the section, so as to simplify the procedure. The amendments provide,—

(a) that if the scheme for the transfer of the assets and liabilities to the State Bank is approved by the boards of directors of the two institutions, such a decision will prevail in spite of any statutory or other provision to the contrary;

(b) that the formal transfer can be made effective through an order of the Central Government, without the necessity of executing elaborate legal documents;

(c) that the residuary institution, after the transfer of its assets and liabilities to the State Bank may, if necessary, be wound up, according to a simpler procedure than is now prescribed;

(d) that the provisions of section 25F and 25FF of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, in regard to retrenchment compensation, which are intended to be applicable in a case in which there is a substantial break in the continuity of employment or a reduction in emoluments or other benefits, will not be applied, in the case of employees whose services are transferred with their consent to the State Bank, on the merger of the institution in which they were previously employed.

Clause 7.—Section 36 of the principal Act provides for certain payments being made to the State Bank of India in reimbursement of the losses incurred by it on the establishment of new branches. It is proposed to clarify the intention that such payments will not be treated as income chargeable to income-tax.

Clauses 4 and 10.—Sub-section(1) of section 50 of the principal Act confers on the Central Board of the State Bank the power to make regulations for the conduct of the affairs of the bank after consultation with the Reserve Bank and with the previous sanction of the Central Government. Among the powers thus specified is a power to establish a pension fund for the benefit of employees who have entered the service of the bank after July 1, 1955. There is some inconsistency between this provision and the provision made in section 30 of the Life Insurance Corporation Act, 1956, read with section 44 ibid and it is, therefore, proposed to introduce a new clause (xxa) in section 33 and to redraft section 50(2) (o), so as to make it clear that the new pension fund for fresh entrants to its service can be established by the bank.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING DELEGATED LEGISLATION

Sub-section (10) of section 35 of the State Bank of India Act, as now proposed, confers on the Central Government power to issue certain directions for facilitating the orderly winding up of banking institutions whose business is taken over by the State Bank of India under that section. It is contemplated that the directions, if any, will be issued only in cases where the residuary company, after it has completely transferred its banking business, will have no further functions to discharge. The delegation of power to the Central Government in such a case to simplify the somewhat elaborate procedure for winding up which is otherwise prescribed by the law is considered to be reasonable.

The new clause (xxa) of section 33, read with sub-section (2) (o) of section 50 as now proposed, clarifies the position in regard to the establishment of certain pension and provident funds for the employees of the bank. The necessary regulations for this purpose will be made within the scope of the power which has already been conferred on the Central Board of the State Bank under section 50(1) of the Act.

The delegation of legislative power in both the cases is of the normal type.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Banking Companies Act, 1949, came into force on the 16th March, 1949, and although it was amended in December, 1956, with a view to extending the powers of supervision and control exercisable by the Reserve Bank, the question of further amending the Act, in order to remove minor omissions or ambiguities in the meaning of certain sections was left over for consideration at a later stage. It is now proposed, in the light of the experience gained in regard to the administration of the Act, to introduce some amendments, mostly of a non-controversial nature, in order to facilitate the application and enforcement of the Act. Opportunity has also been taken to clarify the position regarding the application of the Act to banking companies which have been prohibited from accepting fresh deposits and are in consequence not functioning normally.

MORARJI DESAI.

NEW DELHI;

The 2nd February, 1959.

Notes on clauses

A brief account of the amendments which are now proposed to the Banking Companies Act is given in the notes on clauses below.

Clause 2.—Some difficulty has been experienced in the absence of a definition of the words "branch" or "branch offices" which occur in some sections of the Act and it is, therefore, proposed to insert a definition of these words, the criterion for the definition being whether banking business, as generally understood, is transacted at an office. Some other expressions, already defined in the Banking Companies Act, have since been defined in the Companies Act, 1956; and it is, therefore, proposed to make these later definitions in the Companies Act applicable wherever there is no inconsistency. A special definition of the words "managing director", has however been proposed, in order to exclude directors of banking companies, who are entrusted with supervisory functions in regard to some, but not all, of the activities of a bank.

Some partnership or proprietary concerns, which have been carrying on the business of banking, but are not subject to the control exercised by the Reserve Bank of India under the Banking Companies Act, have been and are using names and styles which include words like "bank", "banker" or "banking". It is not considered necessary at this stage to extend to partnerships and individuals the prohibition in respect of the use of words like "bank", "banker", etc., which now applies to all incorporated companies, or to bring such partnerships, etc., within the scope of the Banking Companies Act. The definition of a company, in section 5(1) (d) of the Banking Companies Act is proposed to be modified suitably in order to make this clear.

Clause 3.—A new section, namely, 5A is proposed to be added, on the lines of section 9 of the Companies Act, in order to clarify the position that the Banking Companies Act will prevail, if necessary, against any other provision in the memorandum or articles of association of a banking company.

Clause 4.—According to the existing scheme of the Act, a banking company is prevented from being a managing agent of any other company. The amendment is intended to prohibit a banking company from being secretaries and treasurers also.

Clause 5.—The amendment is intended to clarify the position that subsidiaries of banking companies, formed in accordance with the provisions of the law, are not prevented from using the names "bank", "banking", etc.

Clause 6.—Section 10 of the Banking Companies Act prohibits the employment by a banking company of persons remunerated on a commission basis. It is proposed to clarify the intention that this prohibition is applicable only in the case of regular members of the staff.

It has also been considered necessary in the light of experience, to exempt from the scope of the restrictions in section 10 the officiating appointment, for a period which will not exceed nine months in any case, of managers or managing directors, who in respect of such temporary appointments may find it difficult to comply with the provisions of the section.

Clause 7.—The amendments are of a drafting nature, and provide for a prohibition, in a positive form, of any withdrawal by a foreign banking company of the cash or securities required under the Act to be deposited with the Reserve Bank of India.

Clause 8.—The amendment is clarificatory and is intended to bring the provisions in section 12 of the Banking Companies Act in regard to voting on a show of hands into line with section 87 and para 56 of Schedule I to the Companies Act, 1956.

Clause 9.—Section 14 of the Banking Companies Act, prohibits a banking company from creating a charge on its unpaid capital. It is considered desirable, in the interests of depositors, to prevent also the creation of a floating charge on the undertaking or any property of the company, without the prior consent of the Reserve Bank of India.

Clause 10.—Section 15 of the Banking Companies Act contemplates that a banking company should maintain its capital intact, by making good from its profits any impairment thereof, before dividends are declared. It is proposed to exempt banking companies specifically from any requirement, direct or implied, that depreciation on approved securities should be written off fully, before other appropriations from profits are made, if the securities concerned have not been sold and if a loss has not actually been incurred.

Clause 11.—The interpretation of section 17 of the Banking Companies Act, which deals with the reserve fund of a banking company has given rise to some difficulty, as it has been held that the fund has to be maintained intact, and cannot, therefore, be drawn upon, even for the purposes for which it was originally intended. The amendments now proposed are intended to introduce some degree of flexibility in regard to the maintenance and use of the fund.

Section 18 of the Act provides for the maintenance of a minimum cash reserve by non-scheduled banks. It is proposed to clarify the intention that the reserve should be held in India. Provision has also been made for the reserve being held in the form of a deposit with the State Bank of India, or a notified bank, where this is convenient to a non-scheduled bank.

Clause 12.—The statutes of certain foreign countries require banks which propose to carry on business in those countries to incorporate themselves under the applicable local laws. Section 19 (1) of the principal Act is, therefore, proposed to be amplified, so as to enable Indian banks which are desirous of opening offices abroad to comply with the requirements of foreign laws.

Clause 13.—Section 22 of the Banking Companies Act deals with the licensing of banking companies, and has been redrafted so as to provide for conditional licences being granted. Opportunity has also been taken to indicate in somewhat greater detail, in compliance with the principles of natural justice, the circumstances in which a licence may be cancelled.

Clause 14.—In section 23, which deals with the opening of branches, provision has been made, as in section 22, for the grant of conditional licences. Opportunity has also been taken to recast the section so as to avoid the doubts arising out of the punctuation in the existing section.

Clause 15.—Section 24 of the principal Act provides for the maintenance of a minimum percentage of liquid assets, including the cash reserve referred to already, under clause 11 above. The amendments proposed are intended to clarify the position that the assets in question must be maintained in India. For the purposes of this section, securities pledged to another bank in respect of a loan obtained from that bank will be treated as approved and unencumbered securities to the extent to which they are not drawn against but only the current account balances, if any, maintained with the State Bank or other notified banks will be treated as assets for the purposes of the section. Certain minor drafting improvements have also been made.

Clause 16.—The object of the amendment is to provide that all the returns under the Act will be as on a Friday.

Clauses 17 and 18.—The amendments proposed are verbal, and are intended to improve the language of section 27, and to extend the scope of the publication of information in relation to banks, which is contemplated in section 28.

Clause 19.—The amendment is clarificatory, and is intended to harmonise the provisions of section 32 of the Banking Companies Act with those contained in section 220 of the Companies Act.

Clause 20.—Section 35 of the Banking Companies Act provides for an inspection of banking companies by the Reserve Bank of India. Specific provision for the inspection of offices outside India of Indian banks is proposed to be made in this section.

Clause 21.—Section 35B of the Banking Companies Act provides for the approval by the Reserve Bank of India of the appointment and remuneration of managing or whole-time directors and chief executive officers of banking companies. It is proposed to provide for control being exercised over the remuneration of ordinary directors also, as under the Companies Act, and to ensure in addition that the effect of the provisions is not nullified in practice by the grant of post-retirement benefits without the approval of the Reserve Bank.

Clause 22.—The reference to section 45 in the existing section 36 is wrong and is being corrected.

Clause 23.—The existing position in regard to banking companies, which have been prohibited from carrying on the business of banking currently is not very satisfactory. The provisions proposed are intended to clarify the position regarding the applicability of the Banking Companies Act to institutions to which a licence has been refused or which have been otherwise prohibited from accepting fresh deposits, etc.

Clause 25.—It is desirable to restrict the further extension of the period of moratorium, if any, which is granted to a banking company after it has suspended payments, if the Reserve Bank is of the opinion that any such extension will not be in the interests of the depositors. Provision has been made accordingly.

Clause 26.—The drafting of section 38 has been criticised by a High Court and a redraft has been proposed, in order to remove the existing difficulty in interpretation. Opportunity has also been taken to extend the Reserve Bank's powers to apply to the court for the winding up of banking companies, wherever this is considered necessary.

Clauses 27 and 28.—The existing position under the law is that in lieu of the Official Liquidator appointed under the Companies Act, 1956, non-official liquidators, if any, already appointed before the 1st April, 1956, may continue in office, and if it is considered necessary, either a Court Liquidator to be in charge of the banking companies generally, or a special liquidator for any particular banking company may also be appointed. The amendments are intended to provide for the exercise by any liquidator appointed for a banking company of all the powers and functions of the Official Liquidator under the Companies Act, 1956, and to clarify the position that fees may be realised, as under the Companies Act, from the companies which are in liquidation, towards the expenses of the liquidation organisation.

Clause 29.—Section 43A of the Banking Companies Act, which deals with preferential payments by a company in liquidation, provides for the depositors of the company being paid after the preferential payments have been made. It is not considered desirable, where provision for any such preferential payments has been made, that payments to the depositors should be held up, merely because of any delay in the actual disbursement of any amount due towards preferential claims. The existing wording in this section is, therefore, proposed to be suitably amended.

Clause 30.—Section 44 of the principal Act which imposes certain restrictions on the voluntary winding of banking companies is now applicable only to banking companies to which a licence has been granted. It is proposed to provide for the restriction being applicable to all banking companies generally and to enhance the powers of the High Court in relation to the control of winding up proceedings under this section.

Clause 31.—The amendment is of a drafting nature.

Clause 32.—The special period of limitation which has now been prescribed in relation to the claims by or on behalf of banking companies in liquidation does not cover the case of banks, the claims of which are already time-barred on the date of the winding up order. Appropriate provision in relation to such banks is, therefore, being made.

Clause 33.—It has been noticed that the returns filed by banking companies in liquidation are in several cases incomplete and unsatisfactory. The penalties leviable under the section are, therefore, being extended, so as to ensure compliance with the requirements of the statute by certain officers to whom it does not now specifically apply.

Clause 34.—The amendments proposed are intended to prevent a private banking company from restricting the voting rights of its members and also from appointing firms or bodies corporate to an office of profit (the prohibition in regard to these matters already applies to all public limited companies, including those engaged in banking).

Clause 35.—A new section, namely, 49A is proposed to be inserted in the Act in order to restrict the power to open or operate accounts on which cheques may be issued to:—

(a) banking companies which are governed by the Act; and

(b) Government, which has introduced the system of withdrawal by cheques at postal savings banks at several important towns, and proposes to extend the facility in due course.

Certain safeguards preventing the conversion of banking companies into non-banking companies without the knowledge or approval of the Reserve Bank are also being provided.

Clause 36.—The provisions contained in sections 18 and 24 of the Banking Companies Act require a company to which the Act is applicable to maintain certain minimum percentages of its liabilities in the form of cash or other approved forms generally. The deposits maintained by scheduled banks with the Reserve Bank of India under section 42 of the Reserve Bank of India Act are treated as eligible assets for the purposes of these provisions. It is proposed to amend section 42 of the Reserve Bank of India Act and also sections 18 and 24 of the Banking Companies Act so as to provide that loans obtained by banking companies from the Refinance Corporation will not be treated as liabilities for the purposes of these sections.
